RUSSIA PROPOSING NEW AUTHORITY FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Suggests Immediate Application of Military Sanctions by Countries Having Mutual Assistance Pacts—Would Add Special Protocol to Covenant and Require Speedy Action

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY

Associated Press Foreign Staff.

GENEVA, Aug. 28 (P)—Soviet Russia tonight made a proposal for League of Nations reform which would provide immediate application of military sanctions by nations having a mutual assistance pact in the event of war. (Russia and France already have a mutual assistance pact which, it was said, is causing concern in Germany.)

Under the Russian proposal military, punitive sanctions could be invoked even before the League of Nations officially fixed blame for a war.

NOT AGGRESSION

League members would agree under the Russian plan, that applications of such military sanctions would not be deemed acts of aggression.

All League members would be required to contribute to economic and financial sanctions applied by it.

The Russian proposal opposed amendment to the League covenant as impractical; proposed instead a special protocol to be adopted whereby the League, in the event of war, would summon its council to meet within three days.

QUICK DECISION

By a three-quarters vote, the council within the following three days would decide whether circumstances were such as to merit application of punitive measures.

The League assembly meets the third week in September to discuss proposals for League reform.

A recommendation of the League committee, associated with Briand-Kellog pact outlawing war, was believed to have been contained in an Argentine communication. Coordinating of peace measures would also include the provisions of a peace pact signed at Rio de Janeiro in 1933, it was believed.

CHINESE WIN ONION BATTLE

Orientals Best Police in Tussle for Vegetables At Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Aug. 28 (P)—Passerby near a Chinese vegetable warehouse in the East End blinked martinet eyes today and they stopped cautiously around fragrant French Valley onions that littered the sidewalk.

The aromatic debris was all that was left to mark the spot where two special constables of Coast Vegetable Marketing Board tried to load four tons of onions onto a Government truck while Ching Chueh and Wing Tog, Chinese farmers, moved the vegetables from their warehouse with the assistance of several helpers.

VICTIMS OF GAS

After moving a few sacks onto the Government vehicle, the special constables gave up the battle as Oriental hands hurled the sacks back into the warehouse. Besides, the onions that fell from the sacks and aquated foot made it difficult to see clearly.

When it was all over an official of the board admitted his men had acted under a misapprehension as to the destination of the produce when they attempted seizure. An injunction prevents seizure of vegetables destined to the Lowe Chong Company, consignees of the dispeased onions.

BEAR HUNT IN TACOMA

Bruin Creates Panic Before Being Killed in Hotel Elevator

TACOMA, Aug. 28 (P)—Tacoma police hunted bear through noon-day crowds on downtown streets today, cornered their quarry in a hotel elevator and shot him dead.

The chase, beginning when the full-grown black bear escaped from a park department crate and truck, led the officers for fifteen minutes through the busiest section of the city while women screamed and hundreds of men ran in all directions.

In his flight, the six-foot-long animal, maddened by wounds, invaded a garage, a bus station and the hotel lobby. The elevator operator was trapped in the lift with him and escaped bruin's claws by inches.

ESCAPED FROM TRUCK

Park officials said the animal, donated by a private owner to Point Defiance Zoo, battered his way out of the truck on a downtown corner. The park employees fired at him, inflicting neck wounds which only infuriated him. The bear leaped away through the crowd, swiping with his claws at pedestrians closest to him. He sought refuge in the first door open.

Motorcycle Officer William Neronville killed him with a single revolver shot after he entered the elevator, which he apparently mistook for his own cage.

ECONOMY FIRST FOR DUPLESSIS

Quebec Premier to Reorganize All Departments At the Start

QUEBEC, Aug. 28 (P)—Reorganization of all Government departments "on a sound and logical basis" was announced tonight by Premier Maurice Duplessis as the opening of a stringent economy programme.

"Already," said the Premier at conclusion of a long meeting of the Quebec National Council, "we have taken steps which will result in the province saving thousands of dollars annually." Economics discussed at the Council meeting would mean a saving of at least $200,000 a year.

SAVING ON STATIONERY

"And besides that, we will save an additional $150,000 yearly by centralizing all purchases of stationery."

No contracts, he said, would be awarded "until seen and approved by us, while all Government printing contracts will have to be accepted by the Premier himself."

Cancellation of insurance policies on all Government buildings in the province, was approved by the Cabinet, said the Three Rivers lawyer.

OFFERS HELP TO SETTLE QUARREL

Dr. Schacht Pleased With Accomplishment in France—Would Negotiate With Soviet

PARIS, Aug. 28 (P)—French newspapers tonight quoted Hajim al-Schacht, Germany's "economic dictator," as offering to settle German-Soviet quarrels with Soviet Russia if the Russians would "give up their violent propaganda which is troubling the world."

Dr. Schacht today concluded his series of conferences with five French political and financial leaders apparently confident that he had cleared the way for negotiations.

"I am leaving," he said, "extremely satisfied with the moves I have accomplished."

FISHERMEN PUZZLED BY UNUSUAL CATCH

Mike Di Maggio is pictured with the thirty-pound "whatsiz" fish he recently caught in San Francisco Bay. Mike took his strange catch to Fisherman's Wharf in the bay city, which is noted throughout the West for its select sea food. No one seemed to know what species it belonged to. Some said it looked like a sunfish, others thought it was a stone-sucker. One grizzled old fisherman said, "It's a fish, let it go at that."

Pope Worried and Weary Studies War News Constantly

ROME, Aug. 28 (P)—The voice of weary Pope Pius XI was said to be "very tired" by persons who saw the Pontiff today. Worn down by anxiety over the Spanish civil war and its religious ramifications, the seventy-nine-year-old churchman today gave up his daily auto ride for the first time in a long while. He, nevertheless, continued to immerse himself in the study of the Spanish situation.

Complaining of extreme heaviness in his limbs, the tired Pope walked scarcely at all today. His exertion was aggravated by a condition of the heart.

Motorcycle Officer William Neronville killed him with a single revolver shot after he entered the elevator, which he apparently mistook for his own cage.

KAMLOOPS, Aug. 28 (P)—Betty Stewart, fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Stewart of Kamloops, was reading yesterday in Royal Inland Hospital tonight after being struck by a dislodged rock while mountain climbing near Scotch Creek, twenty miles east of here.

The young girl received a fracture of the skull, but hospital authorities said tonight she was making "good recovery."

Other youngsters in the party, most of whom were Girl Guides and Scouts, rendered first aid and carried the injured girl down the mountain-side on a cot secured from a prospector's cabin. She was rushed home by car.

Fishermen Prefer to Maintain Status Quo Until Treaty Works

New Regulations Concerning Skeena River Fishing Bring Objections to Change Until Commission Starts Investigation of Present Methods

VANCOUVER, Aug. 28 (P)—New Dominion regulations reducing fishing time on the Skeena River in 1937 and affecting equipment to be used, today drew from officials of fishermen's organizations the view that a status quo in regulations be maintained until the sockeye treaty between Canada and the United States has time to function.

The association referred particularly to any possibility of changes in regulations in the Fraser River area. (The treaty, as amended recently, awaits Canadian approval.)

UNION OFFICIAL'S VIEW

M. E. Guest, business manager of the United Fishermen's Federal Union, Local 44, said: "It is my opinion that, as the international commission of the sockeye treaty will be charged with the responsibility of discovering, through scientific research and surveys, the factual data upon which future regulations will be based, the present methods used in fishing along the Canadian waters should remain in their present relation to the industry until the commission is appointed."

T. Ide, business manager of the Amalgamated Association of Fishermen of British Columbia, said:

A LOGICAL ADVANTAGE

"Our troubles with the Fraser River runs of salmon, particularly the early run of sockeye, have come about with the industry much as it is today regarding gear and equipment. Therefore, it is logical that the sockeye treaty commission will have some advantage to commence its work with the industry as it is today. I most sincerely think a status quo could be maintained."

J. Dunn, secretary of the Fishing Vessel Owners' Association, said the work of the commission would be stultified unless observations were made surrounding the modes of fishing in vogue during the period of depletion of sockeye on the Fraser River.

"I firmly believe," he said, "that fishermen as a whole will heartily endorse the suggestion that no changes be made in the industry appertaining to Canadian waters under the treaty until after the appearance of the commission."

Seattle Mayor Makes Bellacose Talk on News-paper Strike

MERGER POSSIBLE

"It is possible, should the strike continue," Professor Tyler said. "That newspapering and publishing will merge with our newspaper. We may also absorb The Commonwealth News, a new sixteen-page weekly newspaper of the Washington Commonwealth Federation."

Two letters from the guild to The Post-Intelligencer resident publisher, W. V. Tanner, one of them offering safe conduct through picket lines to the building, and the other proposing a "true" meeting drew repudiation from the publishers.

Professor Tyler, president of Harvey O'Connor, New York, author of "Mellon's Millions" and a former Seattle newspaper man, will appear here next week to become editor of the newspaper and rebuild a staff.

FIGHT SPREADING

"The Seattle fight is your fight and it is branching into a national-wide fight."

He praised President Roosevelt as "the working man's friend," and said Governor Landon was "in front of the fight to break down labor."

Dore severely criticized the Washington Industrial Council, and said the Seattle Chamber of Commerce was in a "hell of a mess."

The Seattle mayor said he called in several printers from the strike-bound newspaper, and that they denied a rumor they sought police protection so they could return to their jobs.

Trotsky Interned In Norway After Court Appearance

Bolshevist Exile Under Restrictions and His Secretaries Arrested Following His Admission of Political Correspondence With German

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Norwegian Government tonight interned Leon Trotsky and his wife, but whether they would be forced to leave the country was a matter of conjecture. The Minister of Justice said that the exiled Russian Bolshevik leader would remain in his home at Hoenfoss "until a more suitable place could be found," but he did not indicate this necessarily meant Trotsky must find another home in Norway or leave the country.

The two male secretaries of Trotsky were under arrest tonight, but what official disposition of their cases would be made was not disclosed.

REFUSED PLEDGE

The interment order was issued after Trotsky, once the acting head of the Soviet Government, had refused to desist from revolutionary activities until his permit to live in Norway expires next December 18.

It came as the climax to sensational charges that Trotsky engaged in revolutionary activity in several European countries, and to his own admission, earlier in the day, that he had written letters advising revolutionary leagues to spread.

His deportation and confinement capped a day in which the celebrated refugee made an appearance in court.

POLITICAL COUNSEL

Pale and evidently nervous, Trotsky told a crowded courtroom he had sent letters to France and other countries counselling adher-

RADIO DEALERS DINNER GUESTS

Newest General Electric Instruments Viewed at Empress Hotel Gathering

Canadian General Electric Company were co-hosts with Jameson Motors, Ltd., distributors for G.E. Radio, at a well-attended dinner Thursday night at the Empress Hotel for General Electric radio dealers of Vancouver Island.

H. C. Darroch, manager of the home appliance sales division, opened the meeting by outlining some of the co-operative promotions of the electric company by the General Electric Company in this province, which he believes, are proving a benefit to the entire electrical industry in British Columbia.

The presentation of the 1937 line of radios was preceded by a humorous skit, well staged by members of the General Electric staff. As each new model was shown, it described itself in detail, an ingeniously arranged microphone system being responsible for the illusion.

CONDUCT TONE TEST

The presentation was concluded with a musical "tone test." A. R. Smedley, accompanied on the piano by Cecil Heaton, of Spencer's Music Department, sang "Bellini's" first, during which the audience then put the microphone and through one of the new G.E. radios. This was a convincing demonstration of the undistorted, realistic tone of the new radios, and caused considerable comment among the dealers.

The guests then took advantage of a short recess to examine the new set more closely. J. Cooper, of the General Electric Co., gave an interesting, informal talk, explaining the different G.E. features in the new radios, and caused considerable special interest to the radio men.

RADIO DEVELOPMENT

R. J. Jameson, president of Jameson Motors, Ltd., distributors for General Electric in Vancouver Island, also spoke on the subject in which he traced the origin and development of radio to its present high standard. He expressed the belief that buying power accumulated during the depression will be loosened this Fall, and should make this an outstanding season for radio sales.

Mr. Darroch expressed the regret of all present that S. J. Hall, light and power department manager of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company, had been unable to attend.

F. P. McKittrick, merchandiser of the British Columbia Electric Company, thanked Mr. Darroch and Mr. Jameson on behalf of his company and the members of his staff who were present, and expressed his belief that the Victoria dealers would be enthusiastic in their support of the new General Electric Radios.

G. E. MacDonald, manager of Jameson Electric, Ltd., spoke briefly and enthusiastically on the new radios and the sales promotion being carried out in connection with them, and thanked the hosts on behalf of his company and the members of his staff present.

SERVICE COUNTS

T. R. Myers, publicity agent for the British Columbia Electric, said that in his department it had always been a pleasure to work with the General Electric Company, and gave a special British Columbia representative of the General Electric Company, for his consistent co-operation and helpfulness. More and more dealers, Mr. Myers stated, were coming to believe that in their dealings with the public, the thing that

"Your committee endorses the scheme submitted by C. S. Henley, Alderman James Adam, T. W. Hawkins, Archie Wills and Andrew McGavin were substituted for the original clauses. Points governing expenses and appointment of the city's representatives were widely argued.

The refinancing plan was outlined in full to the council in letters from Mr. Henley, Alderman Brown told the council that the trend today was for lower interest charges. Direct contact with bondholders instead of long-distance negotiation was advocated by Alderman Brown.

"You can't hold a gun to the bondholders' heads," he declared.

"If this scheme is put into operation, it will put the city on its financial feet and increase the value of Victoria's bonds," continued the alderman. He stated there would be money available for street repair funds, with which to consider restoring wage cuts, and money at least twenty-five years plus."

Mr. Henley was presented with water sketches of the Hollinger and McIntyre camps by Mayor Bartleman, who presided.

ITALY.—THE MORNING AFTER

A special commission sent to Italy on behalf of The London Spectator has written a series of three articles dealing with public opinion in that country, about economic conditions, and imperial aspirations. The first of these topics presents some obvious difficulties. It is ordinarily hard enough for any outsider to get into touch with the real sentiments of a population governed by a dictator and supplied with information judiciously measured out through the medium of agencies which he controls. It is harder for English visitors than for others, because they are, for the moment at any rate, regarded with a certain stiffness and a trace of spite. It is probably an after-growth of the hate which the Duce deliberately fostered as the best antidote to the fear occasioned by the apprehension that Great Britain meant to oppose Italy by force. Derision took the place of fear when the latter proved unfounded, the plum of victory fell into Italy's lap, sanctions were abandoned, and in the sunshine of her good fortune Italy acquired a superiority complex of some dimensions. The Italian sincerely believes, first, that he has successfully fought a righteous war; second, that it was a war in which Ethiopia was the aggressor; and third, that the British attitude throughout has been at once hostile and hypocritical.

As to economic conditions in Italy, the story is too long to be told in full detail. Italy's economic troubles began to be serious in 1920, when the United States, which had hitherto absorbed so much of Italy's export of cheap labor, restricted Italian immigration to 3 per cent of the number of Italians then resident in the United States. What steps did Signor Mussolini take to provide employment at home? He worsened the situation by fixing the value of the lira 30 per cent above the level of the French franc. Italy's export trade was reduced because of the higher cost of production. In 1928 exports were 72 per cent in value of exports, and in six years they had fallen to 68 per cent. Between 1926 and 1935 unemployment increased to over a million.

The war relieved the situation to the extent of half a million. War industries, though economically unproductive, give employment and are beneficial for the moment. Valuable industries suffered, however, and what with war and sanctions, Italy's economic position became worse. Cost of living has increased 25 per cent. The gold and exchange reserve of 73,000,000 sterling in 1935 fell to 40,000,000 by the end of the war, an amount which threatens the extinction of the reserve before long.

Italy's imperial aspirations, nevertheless, appear to be as lively as ever. They are two in number. She wants territorial expansion and she ardently desires to prove that she has the capacity to furnish the best type of colonial administration. She thinks that she is now regarded as a first-class fighting nation, and hopes to be known as a successful empire builder and administrator. The Italians have now an opportunity to try themselves out in this immensely difficult field in which they have had little experience and doubtful success.

SINGLE UNEMPLOYED

No plan has been formulated by the Dominion Government to care for the single men who will be unemployed during the Winter months. Ottawa has closed the relief camps instituted by the Bennett Government. The alternative was the employment of 10,000 men by agreement with the railway companies and the hope that another 10,000 would find employment on farms. This plan and this hope have not been wholly successful. Single unemployed men who have been unable to find work have been drifting into the cities, where they have been receiving relief. Soon the extra work on the railways will come to an end, and, as well, other reasonable employment will cease, which means that there will be increased drift to the cities. The situation will become difficult, and the Dominion Government which previously, through the relief camps, had been looking after the single men, will be expected to do something.

A National Employment Commission has been at work devising theories affecting the alleviation of the unemployment problem. It has done nothing so far, save assemble statistics. It has been in existence for some months and should by now be in a position to make definite recommendations respecting the unemployment of single men during the next six months. The Government does not believe in relief camps. That is a policy that has been abandoned. The problem of the single unemployed still remains without a solution of it being in sight.

SUMMER MEMORIES

The holiday season is nearly over, as is indicated by the dwindling flow of visitors to the city. This summer has illustrated again that Victoria and Vancouver Island as a whole have not lost any of their appeal, and it may be that the present season will prove the best, or at least one of the best, ever experienced in all the time since tourists were first encouraged to come here.

In all considerations of the tourist traffic there is the appreciation that people are becoming more travel-minded year after year. The only thing that arrested this development was the depression and the lack of money. The present summer has given an illustration, if any were needed, that the depression has been largely conquered, for people are traveling as they have not done for half a dozen years past. It is only shortage of money which prevents anyone from taking a Summer holiday, for there is always the desire to see somewhere never seen before, or to return to some favored spot that holds pleasant memories. It does not matter into what routine a man may get, or however banalized he may be with wife and family, the time comes when he must be on the move. There are few if any people, perhaps none at all, who are not born travelers from the time of mental appreciation of their surroundings.

The improvement of travel facilities has done more than anything else to increase tourist traffic. The Summer holidays have become a part of life's ritual, only properly observed if there is an entire change of scene and a new environment. Much will be suffered in attaining this change: the horrors of packing are faced, with the certain knowledge that they must be faced again for the return journey. There has to be faced, as well, the gathering cloud on the horizon of the return to work, no matter how refreshed. Perhaps that return is harder than ever in these latter days, for the desire is now, when holiday-bent, to see as much as possible, to keep on the wing all the time, and, no matter how enthusiastic the participant, this is a tiring process.

It is indeed, often a moot question as to the extent to which holidays are of benefit. There has to be weighed in the balance the change of scene and the wear and tear caused by the desire to see all that is possible to see, according to the pocketbook and within the limited time. The probability is that no matter how tired the traveler gets, he has a mental rest, and that is what matters most of all. The worse monotony is of a mental kind, not physical. It is fair to conclude that holidays, of almost every character, are restful, no matter how physically tiring. They must have a definite virtue or else the desire for them would not be so universal. They prevent those who take them from receding into what may seem a Dead Sea of lifelessness. They are spirited intervals in life's journey when men see a little bit more of the world, no matter how limited their view.

U.S. NAVY AND EUROPE

It has been suggested that, in view of the troubles in Spain, and because of other incidents that have happened in the past, the United States Navy should establish a European Squadron for the protection of its citizens. Until 1927 the United States Navy maintained a cruiser and squadron of destroyers in European waters. Then the cruiser was withdrawn, but the destroyers remained. The Raleigh, flying the flag of the Commander, Naval Forces, Europe, was assigned to Europe to relieve the Detroit in September, 1928. The Raleigh visited various European ports and represented the Government of the United States until August, 1929, when she left for the United States without being relieved. Since then the practice of maintaining an American warship in European waters has been discontinued.

The American policy is more and more one of non-intervention in any way with European affairs. That probably accounts for the decision not to have a naval squadron permanently in European waters. That decision has two angles. It saves the United States from possible trouble through incidents that can arise. On the other hand, it means that other countries, and notably Great Britain, have at times to look after American interests, as in the case of the removal of her nationals from war-torn Spain. British warships which were on the spot did much of this rescue work before American vessels could arrive on the scene. It is a question for the United States to determine her own best interests in this matter. Probably her people would have been well satisfied had there been an American squadron in the Mediterranean when the Spanish civil war broke out, but then the Navy of the United States has no base in that sea.

FROM "THE JOYS OF THE ROAD"

... A shadowy highway, cool and brown. Alluring up and enticing down. From rippled water to dappled swamp. From purpled glory to scarlet pomp.

The outward eye, the quiet will, And the striding heart from hill to hill; The broad gold wake of the afternoon; The silent flecks of the cold new moon;

The sound of the hollow sea's release From the stormy tumult to starry peace;

With only another league to wend; And two brown arms at the journey's end!

These are the joys of the open road— To him who travels without a load.

—Bliss Carman.

Nightmare Sends Boy to Hospital

ORRELL, Lancashire, Aug. 28 (UPI)—Sidney Lawrence, twelve-year-old Orrell boy, and a keen climber and diver, had a nightmare.

He mounted the window-sill of his bedroom and took a header into the garden fifteen feet below. Rose bushes broke his fall. He vaulted over a gate and ran screaming down a lane until he was stopped by a passerby.

When he awoke in hospital, Sidney knew nothing of what had happened.

BIRTHDAY SPREE IS RATHER TOO MUCH FOR THIS GAY DOG

NEW YORK, Aug. 28 (UPI)—Knowing her French poodle is a basset for beer, Miss Florence MacFie asked police to search Yorkville apartment where she failed to stagger home at the usual hour.

"He usually comes back about 3 a.m.," said the worried Miss MacFie at daybreak. "He's always kind of wobbly and he zig-zags down the street. But today is his sixth birthday and I never know what may happen to him when he's out on a spree."

Police finally found him over on Park Avenue, trying to direct traffic. They took him to a vet, who wagged his tail and tried to sit up, but it would not go. Then he fell over on his back and went to sleep.

ARE CELEBRATING EGYPTIAN TREATY

General Satisfaction is Expressed At New Understanding Between Great Britain and Egypt

LONDON, Aug. 28 (UPI)—Great Britain and Egypt tonight studied the text of their new treaty ending British military occupation of Egypt on the whole with satisfaction, although one section of the British press criticized it unfavorably.

Reports reaching London said initialing of the treaty led to celebrations in Egypt where guns were fired and flags hoisted. Crowds in the streets at Aboukir, the reported site of the famous "Long Live Africa" shout and cheered victory of the Royal Air Force.

Little criticism of the treaty was noted in Egyptian circles here.

EXHIBITED IN LONDON

Imperial Airways Will Show Scale Models and Photographs of Planes

An exhibition is being built for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, the like of which has never been seen before in Canada. It is being constructed by Imperial Airways, and was exhibited recently in London. It consists of working models and photographs which attract an enormous amount of attention that the company has received requests from all over the Empire to prepare similar exhibitions. The exhibition will be exceedingly modern in character—all most "Wellian" in design.

Visitors will see beautiful scale models of the latest air liners which are now being built for Imperial Airways; models of the wonderful equipment of the transatlantic passenger liner and the two-decker Empire air liner, and models of the Mayo composite aircraft with which it is hoped to start experimental flights across the Atlantic. They will also see models depicting the latest type of airports. Also, shown on a stand will be illustrations of the activities and work of Canadian Airways, Limited.

Visitors will be able to imagine themselves flying over the sky at night, seeing how the air liner lands. They will be able to imagine themselves flying above the clouds far out to sea, hearing the roar of the engines, and the voice of the captain obtaining his position from the control officers on land.

They will be able to land a machine in dense fog and see how the latest marvels of wireless enable this to be done. They will see the machine flying in storms at night, and see how the automatic pilot makes the passage smooth as in the fairest weather.

In short, those who come to the exhibition will gain some insight into the organization of Imperial Airways, the service which links England to Egypt, Palestine, India, Burma, Malaya, Australia and Africa, and of Canadian Airways, linking the populated centres of the Dominion and the districts in the north with bases throughout Canada.

MOVEMENT AT HIGHEST PEAK

Oxford Group Assembly at Birmingham, England, Largely Attended

Under the caption of "A Pageant of Triumph," an enthusiastic account is given in the Christian World, of London, of the Oxford Group assembly held at the British Industries Fair at Bromwich, Birmingham, in the latter part of August.

Twenty-one special trains conveyed thousands of visitors from all over the British Isles, as well as from the various houses which have been held during July in Oxford, Cambridge, Exeter and Harrogate. Inside the great building itself a huge platform to seat a thousand had been erected, with a rostrum for the speakers.

THE VOICE OF YOUTH

Ex-service men of the British forces, and also from France, Holland, Austria and Germany, took part. After a quiet time the drums sounded, and a thousand youths who, through the Oxford Group, had found "the moral equivalent to war" marched in.

The most impressive of all the demonstrations, it is stated, was that of Sunday afternoon, when the procession of ex-service men, who had marched in the morning, was followed by the young people of the British Isles, who had gathered at Vauxhall Ridge, and was entitled "The Drums of Peace." Very nearly a thousand Dutch first marched on the platform. Then came the procession of the representatives of industry, with a shield inscribed "Industry God-Controlled." Next came ex-service men and women of 1914-18 bearing their shield. "The New Enrollment," then came the flags of the thirty-five nations present, symbolizing "the drums of peace" as an answer to all war.

The Birmingham demonstration is considered to have registered the highest peak of the movement.

GREAT PYRAMID IS TALK TOPIC

E. E. Richards Will Discuss September 16 on Focal Date and Possible Events Following

The services at St. John's Church for the Twelfth Sunday after Trinity will consist of Morning Prayer at 11 o'clock and Evensong at 7:30 p.m. The organist, Mr. G. R. Bolster, will be the soloist.

The celebration of the seventeenth anniversary of the consecration of the old St. John's Church, which stood on the site now occupied by the Hudson's Bay store, will extend over two Sundays, September 13 and September 20, and will include a parish "At Home" on the evening of Monday, September 14.

Three prelates of the church will participate in the services in the presence of the Right Reverend Archdeacon of Victoria, the Right Reverend G. H. Williams, Bishop of British Columbia, and Rt. Rev. H. E. Stinson, Bishop of Columbia, and Rt. Rev. S. A. Huston, Bishop of Olympia. Hon. S. F. Tolmie, M.P., whose father was on the first church committee of St. John's, in 1890, will give a short address at the gathering on Monday evening.

A brief general description of the Great Pyramid by the speaker will be followed by an explanation of its particular message for the present time. Current and near-future events will be dealt with as the signs and warnings offered by Christ in the "Olive Discourse," as complementary to the "End of the Age" culminating in the "Battle of the Great Day of God Almighty" (Rev. XVI).

Mr. Richards will discuss the Great Pyramid's focal date, September 16, and the Scriptures intimately connected with it. "Will it mark a special event?" It may initiate a sequence of events sculpturally referred to as "Things to Come" as questions to be discussed. Lantern slides will be used.

CHAPTER XV

At Deeds' McCune's low-voiced threat, Sloan Ellidge merely shrugged his shoulders. Very deliberately he rose to his feet and faced the younger man. His tones were unruled.

"I thought we had decided to drop the dramatics . . . but if you insist." He held up his slender, well-shaped hands and regarded them through his half-closed eyes. "I'd much prefer not to demonstrate, but I could choke the life out of you with those . . . before you know what was happening, my friend. So please . . ."

The cold grey eyes flicked their glance into Deeds' . . . bored relentlessly. With every muscle tense, the younger man appeared to be hypnotized. He heard Sloan's words, seeming to come from a great distance.

"I think you are going to be sensible now. Try to get it into your juvenile mind that I am not defaming anyone's character. You are trying to be very heroic, and you want very much to be recognized, to tell me that the young woman's name is to be brought into our talk."

Deeds moistened his lips with his tongue. But no words came.

"That is all very commendable," Sloan assured soothingly. "You are quite fond of Miss Kendall . . . we might as well have that over with . . . and I admire her, too. I assure you that I have every reason to believe that she is above reproach. In every way . . . Come, I mean that. Something tells me that you would go to almost any length to be of service to Miss Kendall. It pleases me to give you just such a chance . . . to render her a service you never have dreamed of. You may have to do without her thanks, but I can assure you that you'll never regret helping her."

Deeds drew a long quivering breath. "I'm sure you know the terms," Ellidge pursued evenly. "They are easy . . . what you have to do is carry on for a little as you like. The young lady will never know how nearly you have come to making her . . . unhappy, we'll say. You have my word for that. I am not going to ask you for any promise. Just forget . . . all this."

"Very pretty . . . you may stickier. But you'd better watch your steps, and I mean that I would make a young man, and . . . What's the matter?"

"Nothing at all, why?"

"You've aged a lot since morning that's all."

"That's a joke."

"Maybe. I'm not trying to butt in . . . you don't care to tell me?"

"There's nothing to tell." He was having his first chance to carry out instructions.

"I think everybody around here is going to the Jamboree or something. Must be on account of Doc Ellidge taking a bath. John was circling around when I came out, blinking and biting his finger nails. Did you run into him?"

"No, I didn't." Deeds told her grimly.

"I tried to get Joan to come and amuse me and she turned me down flat. Nothing wrong between you two children, I hope. Excuse me. I wasn't going to pry."

"Nothing that I know of," Deeds offered. "I haven't seen her since lunch. Everything was lovely then. He tried to say it easily.

Clare, who was walking slowly beside him, looked up suddenly into his face.

"Do you remember I told you once that you weren't so good at disassembling?"

"I seem to recall something of the sort. But you were right in that particular instance."

"That's rather sweet of you, Deeds. But I can't help feeling you're magna . . . magna . . . You say it."

"You couldn't mean magnificient by any chance?"

"No! Chivalry . . . you know."

"Magnificentous."

"That's it. My tongue won't take the leap at some of those fifty-cent words. But you get the idea."

"I'm afraid I do."

"I mean you're being like that because . . . it's Joan who does."

"We're good friends. That's all."

Something in Deeds' tone caused Clare to drop her bantering air.

"I'm sorry. If you two can only be friends . . . it's Joan who does."

Sloan had intimated pretty broadly that it would mean trouble for Joan. He was willing to lay off provided Deeds kept his mouth shut. For ten days or so . . .

Why that short time? What were the Ellidges pulling off . . . that they would feel themselves in the clear so shortly? Sloan was resourceful and unpredictable. He took the brains of this thing. His brother . . . maybe they weren't brothers at all. Sloan was a duper. A tool.

Joan had said she never saw the Ellidges until she came home this summer. . . . pretty sure she said so. If she had known them, how could she dislike it so cleverly, appear to find them mysterious? And yet, Sloan Ellidge knew something about Joan . . . something that would injure her. It was impossible to take his thoughts light.

Deeds' thoughts were running in an aimless circle. It was so damnably insufferable to take orders from a crook. The more he thought of that angle, the more inclined he was to barge into the Ellidge residence and see if that guy were as good with his hands as he thought he was. There would be some furniture upset before those white fingers clamped themselves on his neck.

But how explain a rough-house in another man's room? It would mean complications, and Sloan was just that smart. He would have the advantage and have the nerve to be magnanimous so that Deeds wouldn't be ordered out.

Sloan Ellidge had won that point, hands down. With matters as they stood now, Deeds McCune wouldn't leave . . . not with Joan exposed to those two. And he had made no promises. He would stay, but that wouldn't keep him from getting along to be a mean proposition to face those mugs . . . nothing at all had happened. But that was his game for the present.

For a long time he sat on the bed . . . thinking, planning, discarding one scheme after another.

He was on one tough spot. In the late afternoon he went to a solitary wall along the shore to get himself in hand. He wanted to make sure of that before he met the others at the beach.

The Ellidge smile on his face as he set his course in an opposite direction to Waples Beach. At least, he wouldn't be followed this time.

A few minutes walk brought him to a well-remembered spot. It was the place on the beach where he had found Joan lying, staring at the water. The place where they had made their clandestine smile on his face as they had decided to be friends. Then, in the face of all that had happened.

He believed he could have told her that he loved her. And he still loved her. He always would . . . no matter what. He'd always trust her. Sure he would. But if this thing only would stop gnawing at him . . . let him think clearly.

It was only a few hours ago that she had begged him softly not to "hurt" her. For an instant there was a look in her brown eyes that made his heart skip a beat. That was all she said. But what did she mean? Did she care at all? Did she want to care . . . and couldn't?

And now . . . he had been warned that Joan's safety lay in his hands. Some danger threatened her. If he only knew what it was. So confounded helpless!

As he rounded a curve on the beach, he started at the sight of a woman's figure. For an instant he was torn between a desire to do a certain amount of playacting.

Deeds moistened his lips with his tongue. But no words came.

"That is all very commendable," Sloan assured soothingly. "You are quite fond of Miss Kendall . . . we might as well have that over with . . . and I admire her, too. I assure you that I have every reason to believe that she is above reproach. In every way . . . Come, I mean that. Deeds' racing thoughts caught at Jere Kendall. Was that the answer? Sloan had voiced the suspicion that her father and John Ellidge had something in common. Maybe the doctor had something on his mind.

Deeds' racing thoughts caught at the Ellidges. He left to try to get in Joan's good graces. Or get her in his power, more likely. World's Leading Singles Tennis Player May Team
Up With Vines for Tour—Amateur Champion
Remains Non-Committal About His Future

By JOHN J. ROMANO

Fred Perry clamps his teeth on the stem of his pipe and puffs contentedly as he visions a $100,000 guarantee for signing on the dotted line. The world's leading singles amateur tennis player is not doing so badly. Perry has a next habit of keeping his thoughts to himself and doing just what he says. No more. No less. Hence the unverified rumor that he plans to tour the country with Ellsworth Vines at the close of the present season.

Returning last year after a non-too-victorious trip in Australia, Perry's name was connected with a beautiful film actress and the word was out that Ellsworth crack requests would soon bring him a benefit and do a series of movie shorts. To the first question, Mr. Perry blandly answered, "Please let the gracious lady answer the question for herself." To the second, Perry expressed the wish to return to England to defend his crown and aid the British defend the Davis Cup. Perry married, when the lady said the word, and in keeping with his promise to return to Merrie England did so and went through with his intention of retaining the title and doing his bit to overcome all opposition for the Davis Cup.

PERRY NON-COMMITAL

Perry is not saying a word about a contemplated professional tour. His tie-up with a British firm would place him near the professional class on this side of the water. Not so with the British amateur officials. They see nothing wrong in Perry's connection with a business firm. How are we, then, to judge him? To place the onus of professionalism on him would come close to ruining the national championships to be held at Forest Hills, N.Y. With Baron von Cramm out of it, the world's champion could put a damper on annual Forest Hills if he could not get over for some time to come.

Linking Vines with Perry is not a bad guess. It is no secret that Bill Tilden invited Vines to tour with him in Europe and was turned down. Tilden is not the attraction he was. The sight of the big Californian, considered on a par with Perry when he was an amateur, brings in the crowds, and that is what concerns Big Bill nowadays; more than anything else. He had his share of glory and would like to cash in on it.

MATCH WOULD DRAW

Perry matched against Vines would attract a great deal of attention wherever tennis is played. Vines has improved his game considerably since turning pro and the question of superiority between the American and Englishman could then be decided. Those responsible for the rumor certainly stirred up considerable talk and who knows but that they may be right. Nothing is lost by it and something will be gained by the lure of big money.

Even Fred Perry to give up the amateur cause and fatten his bankroll at a time when his name is the greatest in the amateur tennis world.

Fail to Reach Decision on
V.A.C. Card—Hopkins
And Quon Triumph

In a match that had the boys demonstrating most of the well-known holds and several of their own creation, Bill Steen and George Lowe wrestled to a one-fall draw in the top bout of a double-main event card presented by Matchmaker Louis Callan, of the Victoria Athletic Club, last night at Royal Athletic Park. A crowd of 400 persons witnessed the four bouts on the card.

In the second of the two main events, Harold Whitehead and Vic Stephens wrestled to a one-fall draw. This match was listless, with the boys putting on mainly a combination of holds and pinning. Reg Hopkins gained a one-fall win over Mohan Singh while Bing Quon wrestled to a one-fall victory over Al Garnet.

GAINS FIRST FALL

In the fourth round of a five-round affair, Lowe was locked in reverse headlock by Steen. Bending suddenly, Lowe stepped Steen into a punishing step over toehold, which had the latter pounding the mat in short order. However, in the last round Steen squared the match with a cruel Indian deathlock, which Lowe could not break.

Harold Whitehead gained his fall in the second round when he held Stephens fast in a body scissors and leg twist. Stephens was forced to concede the fall. However, in the next round Stephens squared the match with a step over toehold and cradled hold. This match was listless throughout. The boys showed little willingness to mix it and appeared to be in poor condition.

Taken a short left hook to the chin from Bing Quon's fist, Al Garnet bit so deeply into his own lip a stitch was required to close it. Quon won this match in the third round with a shoulder butt and body press after some plain and fancy Gartnett-type of rough wrestling was displayed.

Hopkins gained his fall in the third with a body press.

Larry O'Connor Is Second Again

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 28 (UPI)—For the second time in as many days, Laurence O'Connor, of Toronto, scampered over the 110-metre high hurdles in an international track and field meet here today to place second to Fyrrest Towns, of United States.

Towns negotiated the timbers in 14.1 seconds to equal the world record he set in winning the Olympic title. The Toronto speedster was just a shade slower than California's 400-metre Olympic champion, Louis Callan, of the Victoria Athletic Club, last night at Royal Athletic Park. A crowd of 400 persons witnessed the four bouts on the card.

Rails Point Way To Higher Level In Wall Street

NEW YORK. Aug. 28 (AP)—Rails again pointed the way to higher levels in today's market and many issues climbed fractions to two or more points in the face of rather persistent profit taking.

Earnings, dividends and general business trends continued on the upgrade.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks advanced 2¢ of a point to 87.8. Transfers totalled 1,378,200 shares, compared with 1,336,010 yesterday.

The major steel equities were inclined to steadiness.

Merchandising shares were sustained by the mid-week survey of Dun & Bradstreet, which found retail sales continuing their forward swing.

U.S. Industrial Alcohol rallied 1¢ point to 33 after its break yesterday on the continuation of the dividend. Schenley also firmned 1-1/4 to 47-1/8 and Hirsh, Walker & Co. 2-3/4 at 37-7/8 as holders of these issues saw hopes of increased payments.

A strong demand for railroad bonds spread to other groups in the listed market today giving the list a steady to firm undertone.

Foreign bonds followed the general market trend. Gainers included Argentine 6%, Canadian 4%, French 7% and Poland 6%.

FUTURES BRING LOWER PRICES

Coal Production Shows Increase

OTTAWA. Aug. 28 (CP)—Production of Canadian coal in July was 88,297 tons greater than in the same month last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported tonight.

Last month's production was 1,050,007 tons, compared with 1,061,335 tons in July, 1933. In June, 1,033,411 tons were reproduced.

British Columbia's output amounted to 11,281,7 tons as compared with 9,647 tons in July, 1935.

Values closed at virtually the low points of the session, 2-1/2 cents down. October at 95¢, December 94-1/2¢ and May 96-1/2¢. Prices, as the trading pit became flooded with offerings in the closing minutes.

Seizing by the Dominion Government of 6-1/2 cents a bushel as the minimum price for wheat increased from last year's fixed rate, had little effect on markets.

Responsive to late-crop price breaks in corn, wheat at Chicago closed 2-1/2 cents off. At Liverpool was 5-1/2¢ down and Burnside Ares more than a cent.

The movement of new-crop wheat to market continued active. Yesterday's receipts totalled 2,348,000 bushels, compared to 1,084,000 bushels the same day last year.

Corn and coarse grains prices dipped with wheat.

WINNIPEG. Aug. 28 (CP)—Pressure on the market for new-crop wheat brought lower prices for future on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. Conducive, too, to local price weakness were sharp downturns in outside markets.

THE TUTTS... By Crawford YoungHow It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

TROY WEIGHT
It has been suggested that there should be a fair to end all fairs—a suggestion which, so far as we are concerned, meets unsympathetic ears.

We have not seen many fairs; but we have gotten around to more than a few and we have enjoyed every one of them.

We are sure fairs are good for the locality, good for the country, and a first-rate place to observe human nature.

Sometimes we wish we had been born a few hundred years before, so we could have attended many of the early and famous fairs: Stourbridge, near Cambridge; St. Bartholomew's, in London; the French fairs of St. Germain, and those of Champagne and Brie.

Fairs were a vital part of the life of the times; many modern trade practices are said to date from them, including among others the bill of exchange.

At the fair held in Troyes, France, noted for its precious metals, there was evolved one of the bases of our schools.

They formally adopted the jeweler's ounce, which came from Cairo during the Crusades and established the standard of weights and measures known as the Troy system.

Relief at last! Apply the thirty-hour week to farmers at ploughing time and there won't be any surplus.

Jane Dixon Says:

HERE IS A LETTER FROM A WOMAN WHO DELIBERATELY TAKES ADVANTAGE OF ONE MAN'S AFFECTION ALTHOUGH SHE IS IN LOVE WITH ANOTHER

Today's letter speaks for itself. It is an exposition of complete selfishness, of lack of womanly pride; of a pretty hard sort of heart.

Dear Miss Dixon: I am young, have blue eyes and brown hair. I'm working, and getting a good salary.

For the past several years I've been going with a man some years my senior. Everyone thinks we soon are to be married, but I am not in love with this man.

I don't know why I keep on going with him. Reckon it's because he takes me so many places and gives me such a good time. If he should stop I'd sure miss the fun he provides, but I simply can't love him. When we're not going to the movies or some place, we fuss.

He wants me to marry him. I can't. I love someone else.

The boy I love works in a place some distance away. I never see him now. He went with me for several months; stopped; came back while this older man was paying me attention, and now he's stopped again.

SHE'S VERY MUCH PUZZLED
Why do you think he did this? I never mistreated him. Was it because of the other fellow and he thought he didn't have a chance?

What can I do to let him know I love him? Should I write to him and express my love? If so, please give me a few notes about how to write it. This boy I love hasn't so much money, but I'd be willing to work and help him after we marry.

The man I've been going with has plenty of money and could give me anything. The other boy is good-looking and his job will mean a lot later because he can work himself up.

Sometimes I think I'll go on and marry the one I've gone with for three years and make him happy.—Reader of Column.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF AFFECTION

Answer: The color of your eyes and of your hair have nothing to do with the solution of your problem. You might have green eyes and pink hair and still face an issue.

Your trouble is heart trouble. Your heart is not right. It suffers from fatty degeneration of fair play.

You're working. You're collecting good pay for your work. Yet you use a man to buy for your recreation, the pleasure, the fun you should buy for yourself.

You deliberately take advantage of the affection a man has for you to satisfy your worldly self.

While protecting your love for one man, you accept the favors of another and even plan at times to cheat the latter into marriage. The excuse to yourself being that you'll do him a great favor and "make him happy."

This excuse is very thin, for back of it, perfectly discernible, is the fact that you are thinking of your own pleasure and the "plenty of money" that could give you everything.

Perhaps the first young man sensed your selfishness and didn't care to take a chance. If he loves you he'll return and tell you so, and he'll ask you to decide between him and the other suitor. If you wish to do the wooing you'll have to do it on your own. This column does not supply notes on how to bait hooks for reluctant suitors.
